

Guildhall

Guildhall, home to the City of London Corporation

The historic centre and governing body of the Square Mile, the City Corporation supports and represents the interests of its businesses and residents, and promotes London as a world-leading place to do business.

Built between 1411 and 1440, Guildhall was designed to reflect the power and prestige of London and its leaders - in an era when the Lord Mayor of London rivalled the monarch for influence and prestige.

Still the City's civic and ceremonial centre, Guildhall continues to play host to royal, national and international occasions, such as HM The Queen's 90th birthday celebrations, state visits, the annual Lord Mayor's Banquet held since 1502 - and private commercial events.
